DataSys Attains Silver Certification with Microsoft

Marlborough, Mass. – July 31, 2013

DataSys has again attained the Silver designation for Microsoft's Managed Partner Network (MPN) program. The MPN program underscores Microsoft's technical and sales commitment to its partners; in turn, DataSys can offer high levels of technical support, accurate sales information, and in-depth product knowledge to its customers. DataSys' relationship with Microsoft, over its 17 year company history, has been one of the cornerstones of success.

Amongst other benefits, the MPN Silver program provides us with escalation to senior technical engineers, a dedicated contact for obtaining key resources. The Silver level requires that DataSys demonstrate significant competencies, backed by passing scores on examinations, in many key areas. The exams require up to 40 hours of study in the respective area of expertise.

Demonstrated competencies include installing and configuring Microsoft Dynamics GP (GP) and SQL Server. Through rigorous examinations, DataSys must understand and articulate how to plan for, install, configure, and manage GP and SQL server. To strengthen planning skills, DataSys was certified on the Sure Step methodology, a structured approach for identifying goals, requirements, and related tasks for a project.

According to Michael D. Newman, DataSys' Executive Vice President, "It's important to our customers that we can pick up the phone and quickly identify a Microsoft resource. With the constant changes in technology and DataSys' commitment to expertise, our partnership with Microsoft helps the DataSys team offer unparalleled excellence in service. I've been at DataSys for more than 13 years and have seen the power of partnerships, whether that's our relationship with Microsoft, our commitment to the DataSys team, or our many valued relationships with customers."
